

Dr. Sharon T. Freeman, president and CEO of the All American Small Business Exporters Association (AASBEA), is a successful entrepreneur who has been on the cutting edge of social change and innovative business development for almost three decades. Having established her flagship company Lark-Horton Global Consulting and AASBEA, she has undertaken major development assignments in over 100 countries. She has a deep understanding of key issues pertaining to competitiveness and development. Recognized as a leading expert on trade and development, Freeman has been appointed to numerous U.S. government boards, the Department of Commerce, the EXIM Bank, the U.S. Trade Representative's Office, the Small Business Administration, and the Department of Energy. She has also won awards from leading business institutions and government agencies in recognition of her business and community leadership and business successes.

Dr. Freeman lived and worked in Hong Kong for 12 years and previously served in the U.S. Diplomatic Service. She is the author of 17 books.